Let's get started! What is a Division 2 Build? In Division 2, builds represent a specific arrangement of weapons, gear, skills, and stats selected by the player to prepare the character with the best equipment for certain PvE or PvP encounters. Also known as "setups" or "loadouts," builds are divided into multiple categories based on the purpose they are used for. Like any looter-shooter, Division 2 has a complex character progression system that revolves around different weapons, gear, skills, and various end-game activities that automatically require specific builds to be prepared and taken care of. In this guide, we will go into detail through all these builds and categories so you can easily decide on the best build for your Division 2 character. My build-making experience in The Division Agent, I proudly consider myself one of the most dedicated players that this franchise brought to the looter-shooter scene over the past six years. At this point, I have invested over 5000 hours in The Division games, and I spent most of my time trying to figure out the best builds for different PvE and PvP scenarios. Due to the games' complexity, things constantly change, and so do the meta builds for different PvE and PvP scenarios. Due to the games of builds in TD2, so it's safe to say that I know all the tips and tricks on build-making and min-maxing in the game. Let's dive in! The core elements of a Division 2 build are: The Weapons The Gear The Skills The Stats & Attributes The Mods The Specialization These are the key components you must focus on when creating a build for your character. When these elements are wisely chosen and put together, they create a synergy that will reflect your build's power and capability. Note: Please keep in mind that in Division 2, the gearing for the end-game builds comes as a package with the grinding for the rarest items or mods out there. So if you aim high, get ready for some serious time investments, and rest assured that it's worth it, by all means. The rare items used in the best Division 2 weapons play a huge role when choosing the perfect build for your character. You have access to various weapon types, so the game covers it all, whether you prefer a close-combat playstyle or sniping the enemies from long distances. There are plenty of weapons to choose from and use for your favorite builds. You can use three types of weapons in the game: high-end weapons, named weapons (better variants of the standard weapons), and exotic weapons. Your character comes with three weapon slots so that you can equip and use up to three weapons are the best to use for your loadout based on the combat style. We'll briefly go through the main weapon types and see the correlation between the weapons and the playstyle they imply. Below you can find the main weapon types you can find the weapon types you can find the main weapon types you can find th Guns: for medium-long range combat Shotguns: exclusively for close combat Sidearms: best for close combat If you are looking for the best weapon for DPS builds The Regulus: the best weapon for pistol builds Scorpio: the best weapon for DPS and support builds Capacitor: the best assault rifle for skill builds Mantis: the best marksman rifle for shill builds Pestilence: the best weapon type for your build. To optimize you have to make sure you use the best weapons with the proper stats and talents. The Gear Like the weapons, in Division 2, players get to choose from various gear for their builds, such as Brand Sets, Gear Sets, and Exotic Armor. There are six gear slots that you must fill in with the best variants for your build: mask, backpack, chest, gloves, holster, and kneepads. The game has improved a lot since its launch, so nowadays, you have the opportunity to choose from 14 Gear Sets and 23 Brand Sets when going for that perfect build for your character. All these armor sets come with unique set bonuses and talents, which is a significant factor in the build diversity the Division 2 players face. There are many cases when the players get discouraged when they find out there are so many gearing options available in the game, and they don't know what to choose out of all these armors, where to start from, or how to mix and match the items when working on their builds. We'll briefly go through the best exotics and gear sets used in the ongoing meta: The most popular Division 2 gear sets in 2022 are: Heartbreaker Set: best for assault rifle and LMG DPS builds Hunter's Fury Set: best for SMG builds Foundry Bulwark Set: best for status effect builds Rigger Set: the perfect choice for skill builds As for the best exotics, the most popular exotic armor items used in the 2022 meta builds are: Memento: the best exotic backpack in the game Waveform: the best exotic builds Tardigrade: the best exotic chest for tank builds BTSU Datagloves: the best gloves for healer builds This is the main reason we created this guide: to make your build-making experience a lot easier. Later in the guide, we will show you exactly what items to combine to create some of the best Division 2 builds in 2022. On top of that, if you ever encounter any difficulty getting the desired items for your builds, we provide boosting services as well, so you can buy Division 2 Exotics or God Roll Farming and complete your builds in no time! The Skills in Division 2 build: the Skills you will be using. There are 11 skills you can choose from in the game, each having multiple variants. Though the character comes with only two skill slots, so you can equip and use a maximum of 2 skills at any given time. However, you have the freedom to combine ANY two of the skills available in the game, as no restrictions are forcing you to use a particular skill based on your equipped loadout or stats. We won't insist too much on this aspect right now as we'll get more into details when showcasing the builds and the best skills to use for each of them. Here are some of the skills that you can use in Division 2: Division 2 Specializations Moving on to the following key component: The Specialization has its skill tree that unlocks a unique signature weapon, unique skills, skill mods, and a special type of grenade related to the specialization build. Based on the desired build you want to focus on, there are six specializations you can choose from: Specialization build. What comes next focuses mainly on min-maxing and getting the optimal stats for the build. In Division 2, each item has a core attributes, which are special bonuses that improve specific weapon or armor stats. Items can also be socketed with mods. There are two types of mods based on the item type: gear mods and weapon mods. Players use the mods to improve the stats on the desired items. We call the "best-in-slot" or "perfect" gear piece the item with the best talent, the perfect attributes, and the best mod for a particular build. A build is 100% optimal only when you have the right talents, stats, and mods on your items. Once you've figured out all the items that you need for your build, it's time to get to work and start farming for them. Now let's see where you can find the required items for your builds. When the game was released, going for specific items was a pain. There was no targeted loot, so you were dealing with a ridiculous RNG factor as any enemy could have dropped any item in the game. Nowadays, in 2022, with new activities and features such as The Summit and Countdown, build-making in Division 2 is to use the targeted loot feature in The Summit and The Countdown activities. Here, you can select the desired item type to drop as targeted loot upon killing enemies. So basically, you can filter the drops you will be getting by weapon type, armor slot, brand set, gear set, or mods. Example: Let's say you are looking for a particular exotic mask, Coyote's Mask. To increase the odds of dropping this exotic mask, you must select the desired item slot - in this case, masks. You will notice that all the named enemies will drop masks as targeted loot, which speeds up getting your desired mask. Once you get the menu and targeting the menu and targeting the menu and so on. Exception: The only exceptions here are the raid-exclusive items that drop only in the raids (The Eagle Bearer, The Ravenous, and Regulus) and the crafted items to the second category as targeted loot, but only after you would have already crafted them at the crafting station. Apart from the two game modes, another targeted loot feature is available in the Open World. In this case, you complete Control Points and Missions on the highest difficulties possible. You can still maintain it as a farming process, but the downside is that you cannot change the loot type by yourself. Each zone or mission on the map has its own targeted loot that resets on a 24-hour cooldown. Regardless of what method you prefer the most, make a list of all the items required for your build and farm for them as targeted loot one by one until your loadout is complete. Now that you know the best ways to obtain the gear and create loadouts, let's move on and teach you how to choose the best build for your character in Division 2. Generally, we all have a hard time figuring out the perfect build to match our playstyle. Given the game's complexity, with so many items and options to choose from, sometimes it's hard to figure out what the best build for you would look like and where to start. Let me help you with that. Here's a little trick that works like a charm every single time. Try to answer the following questions when choosing the best build for your Division 2 character: What type of weapons have you enjoyed the most in other shooter games? What are your favorite weapons in Division 2? What about your playing sessions? Do you mostly play solo or as part of a group? What type of activities do you want to focus on? PvE or PvP? How much time are you willing to invest into your build? Are you looking for an easy-to-get build or something that uses rare items in the game? To start with, figure out the answers to these questions, and you'll have a pretty good idea of what your build should look like and focus on it. Then, check out our recommendations for the best for you. I'm sure we have already covered a similar build to what you're looking for. You can either create replicas of the builds we posted on our website or take them as reference points, improvise, and create your own builds - your call! How to min-max your builds in Division 2, min-maxing represents the act of creating a build around a specific concept or game mechanics, such as a particular playstyle (solo/group), combat style (close range, medium, or long-range), or a specific role in a group (DPS, tank, healer, etc.). You will optimize and focus on a specific playstyle and everything else. So the result of a min-maxed build is an extremely powerful character in one particular way but exceedingly weak in others. Example: Let's say you aim for the best healer build for your character, and your whole build revolves around healing and keeping your teammates alive. You must be fully equipped with healing skills (+% Repair Skills), and specific weapon talents such as "Reformation" (Headshots grant +30% skill repair for 15s). So right now, this is your trade-off: you are highly efficient in healing your teammates, but you can't take or deal an insane amount of damage as a healer. To make an idea, this is what a healer build looks like: Min-maxing is all about getting those perfect items for your build. You aim for the best-in-slot items for the build, with maximum stats, perfect mods, and talents. It's an easy guess that min-maxing equals grinding. So what's the fastest way to get that ideal loadout for your character? Here are some tips on how to min-max your build in Division 2: If you run solo, use the Matchmaking system in the Summit and Countdown to get more players. Play efficiently on the highest difficulty possible. The higher the difficulty, the better the rewards. Always use Targeted Loot. It's the fastest way to get extra chances of obtaining the missing items. Use the Recalibration and Optimization Stations to recalibrate and optimize your gear. Once you have recalibrated and optimized the items for the build, work on your Proficiency and Expertise Levels. You can find the Recalibration Station in the Base of Operations and The Summit lobby. This is what it looks like: Once you will recalibrate optimize, and increase the proficiency and expertise levels for your gear: That's pretty much everything you should know about choosing the best build for your character and how to optimize it and make it top-level. Now it's time to see what type of builds you can opt for and what are the best Division 2 builds in 2022. Let's dive in deeper! The game's complexity has forced its community members and dedicated content creators to develop Division 2 builds to cover all the various playstyles, combat styles, or roles for all the PvE and PvP activities available in the game. This has been an ongoing process since the game is launch, and the Internet is now flooded with variants of the same type of builds that share the same principles and serve the same roles but come with minor adjustments. So to make it a bit easier for you, let's see the main builds are used exclusively in PvE activities (Summit, Countdown, Missions, etc.) PvP Builds: these are the best builds to use for PvP activities such as Dark Zone and Conflict Solo Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds: extremely powerful builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to play with Group Builds for solo players that don't require a team to players that don't require a team to these are the damage-dealing builds, as they provide the highest damage in the game Support Builds: these builds cover support roles in particular and present you with the best builds that stand out in each of these

Customize the desired boost, and we're good to go, Agent! What is the best Division 2 Build for PvP as a solo player in 2022? This is one of the most popular questions we get regarding Division 2 builds, especially when it comes to PvP. It's understandable because when you focus on the competitive modes in the game, you want THE best build for your character, so the other players don't stand a chance in front of you. However, you will never find that "one" PvP build that outstands all the other builds. At the end of the day, it's all about the players' skills and what they enjoy the most. Some players enjoy close combat PvP fights, so the best builds, in their case, will revolve around SMGs, Pistols, or Shotguns. On the other hand, some players are experts in the cover-based playstyle, so they prefer sniper-rifle or skill builds. As long as you have the right skills, these are all perfect candidates for the "best PvP build in Division 2". This section covers the Title Update 15 meta builds. These builds revolve around the newest items recently introduced in the game with the launch of Season 9, such as the Heartbreaker set, the Kingbreaker AR, the Bluescreen LMG, the

During all these years, as Massive kept improving the game with the addition of new items, fixes, and balances, the DPS meta builds in TD2 have changed a lot. I'm talking about both PvE and PvP. Thanks to the Division 2 community and its dedicated content creators, you now have plenty of options to choose from when picking up the best DPS builds for Division 2 in 2022 are: Assault Rifle Build LMG Build Skill Build One-Shot Pistol Build multiple tiers of difficulty, with Legendary being the highest one. However, you can only embrace the legendary difficulty within The Summit and the Strongholds in the game. Trust me. Your enemies are members of the White Tusk who are dealing increased damage, they have increased health pools and advanced skills. This automatically leads to the necessity of a solid build that can handle all that pressure and extremely challenging content. Not to mention that the legendary difficulty also requires some advanced player skills...a little shoutout here to the White Task "Rushers". If most of the DPS builds can cover the Heroic difficulty with ease, you don't have too many options to choose from for the legendary content. You must be extremely cautious, and if you are a solo player, you must use a cover-based playstyle. This is why the skill build is one of the best DPS builds for legendary missions in Division 2. You stay safe, in cover, and the skills do all the work for you. However, if you're not a big fan of skill builds and prefer pure firearms builds, you still have two viable options. One build serves a close-combat and uses a shield and a shotgun (Armor Regen Build). The other setup focuses on medium-long range combat and uses assault rifles or an exotic light machine gun (Negotiator's Build).
